

Global Citizenship@ Brookhouse

At Brookhouse, Global Citizenship encompasses a purposeful mindset developed through exposure and exploration, leading to understanding and respect.

It is shaped by the six pillars of the Round Square IDEALS which structure out interpretation of Global Citizenship, whereby students develop inter-cultural understanding that enables them to function successfully within and beyond their communities as global citizens. Thus we aim to inculcate in children the values of:-

Internationalism – a readiness to embrace a wider global perspective, understanding global challenges and appreciating and celebrating a rich diversity of cultures

Democracy – valuing the importance of active participation in the democratic process, where freedom of thought and speech are encouraged and appropriate forums within school and beyond provide avenues for responsible self-expression.

Environmental stewardship – encouraging a sustainable approach to the earth's resources, an appreciation of the outdoors, an awareness of global environmental challenges and compassion for the environment students live in. At Brookhouse, we develop in students an awareness of the need to conserve the natural world as guardians of our collective future.

Adventure – promoting the personal growth of each student through opportunities to step outside comfort zones and experience challenge that leads to self-discovery in the Hahnian sense of 'there is more in you than you think'

Leadership – through both the experience of failure and success, students have opportunities to grow in courage and compassion and view leadership as an opportunity to serve others, valuing the 'servant leader' model as the way forward for Africa and the world in the 21st Century.

Service – focused on meaningful 'hands on' service engagement with community partners in order to appreciate the importance of thinking of others before thinking about oneself.

At Brookhouse, global citizenship is a process, not an outcome that develops leadership skills rooted in kindness and justice, practiced individually and collectively. Tolerance is nature to develop an awareness and respect for oneself, others and property.

Global citizenship prepares young people for responsible lives.
